Why should the public like this settlement? It does not change a single thing about how Microsoft will run their business and the consumers will be the ones to pay the price. Every time we have to go and spend $200 - $250 for a OS that is full of bugs and problems because there is no choice of OS's for us, we lose.

Here is a perfect example of why this settlement needs to be stiffer. I checked out the price for windows 98 and after over 2 yr. on the market it is still the same price as when it came out. Why is that, who does MS have to worry about concerning pricing. No one. They have bled every company out that could or would compete with them for years, it is time too stop this and allow for other company's to do their own thing and provide the consumers a choice in products at a fair price.
